College Receives 55-Acre Grant From Palos Verdes Corporation

A gift of 55 acres of land by the Palos Verdes Corp. to Palos Verdes College was announced this week by John A. Howard, president of the college. The deed, transferring title of the acreage to the school, was presented to President Howard by Frank A. Vanderlip Jr., president of the corporation making the gift.

The valuable real estate, which includes the present college campus, in Rolling Hills, will be incorporated in the school's master plan of expansion.

According to the college's 31-year-old president, the first addition to the campus will be a dormitory costing $160,000. Other structures to be erected in the course of the Palos Verdes College's 15-year building program are: three dormitories, additional classroom buildings, a combination auditorium, little theatre and chapel, an art building, library, administration building, student center and gymnasium.

The noted Los Angeles architectural firm of Welton Becket, F. A. I. A., and Associates, will design the structures to be built on the college campus and will also be in charge of the school's entire building program. By the terms of the deed the architecture and general appearance of the college will be kept in harmony with the present type of architecture now in use in Rolling Hills.

In making the presentation to the college, Vanderlip stated: "The Palos Verdes Corporation is fully aware of the importance of providing educational facilities for the youth of America and it is in a spirit of continuing to assist privately supported schools of learning that this grant was made."

The Palos Verdes Corporation has also assisted the Chadwick School and Marmount College in acquiring campus sites in the Rolling Hills area.
